Dolbey Announces Integration of Fusion Suite with Clario's zVision Worklist

CINCINNATI, OH and Seattle, WA, March 31, 2010 — Dolbey and Company announced recently the integration of their Fusion Suite™ speech recognition technology with the Clario Medical Imaging, Inc. zVision™ unified worklist. The integration offers a radiology solution that integrates workflow, practice management and reporting.

Fusion is an enterprise-wide suite of products specifically designed to alleviate today's healthcare IT headaches. This fully integrated solution includes innovative software and hardware for your dictation, transcription and speech recognition needs. Fusion provides specialized workflow between these three elements and integration with core hospital and clinical systems to provide prompt accurate medical documents for the demanding patient care environment.

zVision is a true unified worklist that integrates a multi-system environment providing superior access to patient information. zVision offers intelligent real-time dashboard and practice statistics, advanced search and filtering, results communication tracking and integrated peer review. zVision's integration with ReportNow offers radiologists a single source to access patient data and reporting technology.

"Integration of disparate systems is becoming more important as radiologists are reading for multiple locations. zVision integrates these systems and brings patient information together in one location. The integration of Fusion will provide radiologists with even more efficiency by providing innovative speech recognition tools. We are pleased to be able to offer this option," commented Bob Leslie, Senior VP/GM at Dolbey.

"zVision is designed to provide radiologists with a single source to access patient information and the technologies they need. Integration with the Fusion Suite will offer radiologist access to dictation, transcription and speech recognition from the zVision unified worklist," explained Chris Wood, CEO at Clario, "We're pleased to offer Fusion integration to our customers."
